Now begin with, excessive facial sweating is not contagious. It is sometimes referred to as public disorder, because when you have it, you just move away from the crowds, to avoid embarrassment. First things first, you have to understand that if you have facial hyperhidrosis, your body will not function if you say overreact to certain stimuli. It's more of your central nervous system.

Why do you have it could be a never-ending question that creeps through your mind. There are cases where this occurs due to genetic problems. If other members of your family is going through the same situation, because they were born when he is alone. Sometimes, because it is directly related to your nervous system, you sweat more when you are a big stress.

Please note that it is normal to sweat on the forehead, nose and cheeks after a rigorous workout for you in the excessive facial sweating category does not include. It is but natural to sweat, because it is a way to run your body heat to cool you down. What you have is exactly that, if you are suffering from excessive sweating just sitting at nothing to make it more difficult, then you have serious problems.

There is an over-the-counter medications available to control excessive facial sweating that you experience. This is relevant because it means that you simply have to apply it to your face and wait for some time to work. This is the face of antiperspirants and creams in the form of roll-ons. But be aware that you should not use underarm deodorant on your face because the face texture and slope is different from your armpit - it is too sensitive.

Did you know that you can prevent or even stop excessive facial sweating, Acupuncture? This is a long way to China and put a stop facial hyperhidrosis. The treatment will be successful after a few treatments, so there is no instant miracle dry form to speed up your condition. You can also try natural methods such as using herbs to neutralize the excessive facial sweating.

Have you tried to eat sage leaves? They deal with excessive perspiration and sweat if you have other parts of your body that emits a bad smell, basil leaves work well in accordance with the smell. Nature can be a great help you deal with this' problem. It is actually a medical condition, but the only good thing is that it can be treated naturally or artificially injecting Botox to freeze the sweat gland function.
