A psychic is a person who is sensitive enough to be a seer and channel energies accordingly. It comes from the Greek word psychikos which relates to the mind, mental or metaphysical plane. A person who can channel that energy and information correctly is termed as a psychic. He or she can perceive information that is beyond the immediate reality seeing through past and future. These are information that stay away from the normal senses and are related to the extra sensory perceptions. Thus ESP or extra sensory perceptions are related to such abilities and faculties of the psychic field. The word psychic has also been used in terms of theatrical performances where the Greek theatrical techniques related to performance get used. These presentations are termed as prestidigitation, cold reading and hot readings which in turn associate with the various aspects of such presentations. The word also tells telekinetic powers expressed through such abilities of the mental and paranormal faculty.

The telekinetic assertion and powers of such kind have been explored down the history. The ability to influence and read the minds or incidents through such possibilities has been explored since the beginning of human civilization. The study of the esoteric and psychic realms has been an ancient one being delved into, buried and unearthed through different stages of history. In different geographical regions and locations, these have come up from time to time through the separate stages of development. There have been various instances where the power of the paranormal and the nature of such studies got damned and exploited by power-hungry religious institutes and different autocratic bodies. Psychic powers have also been referred in the direction of the ability to influence the mind and have an indirect recourse to manipulate someone or even the masses. Such powers were used by those like Uri Geller, in order to create sweeping waves of mass influence.
