Adding good value to your space by Sam Williams

Article published on February 6th 2012 | Home Improvement

Considering the economy of today, everybody would like to make additions to their home at minimal cost. It is after all quite a costly affair to lay brick and mortar to your home and add more space to it. One of the best ways to make the most of your existing space is to convert an area that is not being used for much into something more useful â€“ as in the case of your loft.

There are several advantages to converting your loft whether you are in Stockport Cheshire, or any other place in the world. One of the most important advantages is the monetary value it will add to your home. As with every homeowner, everything you do to your home will be from the viewpoint of its current market value. You will not want to do anything that will undermine its price on the market. When you convert your loft, studies have shown that this can add as much as 20 per cent to your property which is a sizable amount.

There are other immediate advantages to converting your loft and the first is the creation of space that you will need. This space can be for an additional play room for the kids. Or perhaps your teenagers are looking for a jam room for their garage band. Or maybe you have some long term guests visiting and you would like to create space for them without compromising on the space already allotted to each member of the family.

In such cases it is always necessary to first evaluate what you want out of the space. Once you have that sorted out, you will be able to budget for the conversion. One rule of thumb is to ensure that the cost of conversion is not more than what you will get in terms of the 20 per cent addition in price. Only then does it become worth the effort. You will also need to get a professional to do the job for you as you need to maintain aesthetics as well.

Having an unsightly addition to the house can actually bring down the price of your home. The space you create can be used for just about anything â€“ from a home office to a sleepover room to even a home theater area. No matter what way you plan to use the room, you can be sure that you are getting the most value for your money in the current economy.
