Article published on December 22nd 2011 | Home Improvement

Award winning architects and designers design the best house plans for their clients. These are a blueprint of the entire home drawn in order to know how the house will finally turn out to be. These are a necessity in planning and construction of homes. Chalking out this plan is regarded as the very first step in construction. The plan is always kept in mind while working on any project. These plans could deal with all sorts of homes whether having two bedrooms or three, etc. These diagrams give a rough idea to the client of how his home would look after construction is completed.

These are made in rough and then finalized once all details are looked into and the client is satisfied with the work of the architect. This consists of every possible detail of sectioning between the different areas of the house and the exact position of the rooms and other places like the kitchen, bathrooms, balconies, etc. The use of each room is clearly mentioned and also the different balconies and their utilities are highlighted. For example, a dry and wet balcony is designed in order to solve different purposes. Depending upon the planning of the house, the bathrooms are placed and the space is sorted out.

It is very necessary to mention all the dimensions because workers constructing the house always strictly adhere to the blueprint. The scale that is used to denote the exact dimensions is also mentioned. The area of each room and other parts of the home are also pre determined. Basic fixtures of the house which are provided for by the builder are also fit in and the positions of these are also marked in the plans. The layout of the whole house along with a small part of the corridor outside is included in the blueprint.

The directions of the position of the house are also mentioned. Every builder plans differently and it is the presentation of the house plans that helps the clients to select which plan is better than the other. The additional features of construction that cannot be drawn in the diagram and relate with the quality, are mentioned separately in notes to the main plan. These help in giving the clients a thorough knowledge in every detail regarding the structure, shape, area and directions of the house. Blueprints of homes are always designed keeping in mind the lifestyle of the targeted group of the society.
