Article published on February 28th 2012 | Home Improvement

Carpets are usually deemed as a luxurious accessory for a home. Most people assume that their house doesn't really need a carpet when they have good flooring. But what people do not know is that carpets protect floors from being damaged or soiled. Thus, this article aims to debunk some myths surrounding the use or installation of carpets in the hope of giving carpets a better image.

Carpet Myths

Buying inexpensive carpets will save money. Buying a low grade or cheap carpet may sound good initially because it saves a person from spending lots of money. But most discounted carpets are made from low-quality and less-durable fiber. These carpets' latex backings are mixed with clay filler called bentonite which makes traffic patterns (i.e. footsteps) visible and irreversible. In the long run, when these carpets need costly maintenance and become easily damaged, they can cause headaches for homeowners.

Carpets only need cleaning when they are dirty. This is a common misconception that people almost always practice. In contrast, carpets need routine cleaning even when there is no visible dirt in them. Invisible bacteria and dirt can destroy a carpetâ€™s fibers, making it more vulnerable to damage. Hence, doing major carpet cleaning twice a year guarantees homeowners that their carpets will remain in top shape for a long time.

Vacuuming my carpet twice a week is enough. According to the US Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA), vacuuming a carpet everyday is recommended. Carpets can house dust, molds, animal hair or dander, which can cause skin allergies or aggravate asthma. Dirty carpets also host bacteria. Carpet Columbus area professionals offer high-quality carpets which minimize accumulation of dust for a short-time and regulates room temperature during cold months.

We really don't need carpets, we have good flooring. Even when you have good flooring, it needs to be protected from damaging elements like water, continuous foot traffic and dirt. Hence, the kind of carpet Franklin stores offer can not only beautify a home but protect its floors as well. High-quality carpets can reduce the impact of foot traffic and can also dampen noise.

Carpets are best kept when sprinkled with deodorizing powder. Although deodorizers may be used to keep carpets smelling fresh, they cannot be considered cleaning agents. Fine talcum powder can accumulate from repeated use and can stick to a carpet's backing. You can consult Indianapolis carpet stores homeowners recommend to find out which type of deodorizing agent is best for your carpet.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/home-improvement-articles/common-misconceptions-about-installing-or-opting-for-carpets.htm - Article Side

Ailith Blesington - About Author:
For more details, search a Carpet Columbus, a carpet Franklin, and a Indianapolis carpet in Google for related information.

Article Keywords:
carpet Columbus, carpet franklin, indianapolis carpet

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!