A Guide to Planning Your Outdoor Lighting by Raven Wilson

Article published on February 1st 2012 | Interior Design

Outdoor lighting is often used to highlight the garden at night and at the same time add to the security of your home. The light from the outdoor lighting will brighten the exterior of your home and make it a lot safer. Outdoor lighting also makes it possible for you to entertain outdoors. If you have outdoor lighting then you can have either a romantic dinner or a huge party right in your garden.

The installation of garden lighting requires proper planning in order to achieve the desired effect. You need to carefully plan the different locations in your property where you will be installing outdoor lighting. To make it easier for you to plan your outdoor lighting, you can draw a map of your outdoor space. You have to draw the house including the windows and doors as well as the patio, deck and pool. For a more accurate map, you also have to draw the trees and bushes in your garden. The driveway leading to your home should also be included in the map as well as the pathways since they will also need to have some outdoor lighting installed on them.

Once you have drawn an accurate map of your property then you can select the specific areas that need to be illuminated. Outdoor lighting can be installed around your deck or patio. Outdoor lighting can also be used to highlight your garden pond as well as other landscaping features.

For security purposes, outdoor lighting should also be installed in the areas near the doors. You can install outdoor lighting near your front door and back door. This is to ensure that all the entrances to your home are well lit during the night time. This will make it safer for you when you come home late at night. It will also be easier for neighbours and passersby to spot any intruder who will try to enter your home while you are away or asleep. The sight of the outdoor lighting in your property will immediately discourage any attempt from intruders.

For safety purposes, the pathways and driveways in your outdoor space should also be installed with outdoor lighting. The Solar Lights will make it safer to walk around your property even at night. This is also very useful for huge garden areas because you will easily see the path leading to the house if it is brightly lit by outdoor lighting. There is no danger of walking right into the bushes or a tree if the pathways are well-lit.
