Picture Frames for Photographs and Collectibles by Eric Blair

Article published on May 3rd 2012 | Interior Design

When it comes to hanging decorative items on your walls, your options are endless. When you think outside of the box, there are so many things aside from family photographs that you can use frames with. Depending on your personal taste and the overall look of your home, you can use items and decorative frames that will really create something special. With an endless variety of frames to choose from, you will have the option to hang your photos, artwork, and collectibles in a million different ways. Your first step will be deciding what it is you want to frame.

Decorating the walls of your house can be a real creative project. You donâ€™t have to limit yourself to simple school pictures or family photographs. Maybe you are someone who has a big box of collectible items. Consider taking them out of the box, dusting them off, and displaying them. You can frame and hang unique things like records or album covers, jerseys and baseball cards, comic books, and even your own artwork. When it comes to decorating the walls of your own home, you can really do just about anything.

Donâ€™t think for a second that whatever you decide to frame has to be flat and square. With products like antique bubble glass frames, you will have the ability to hang larger and even oddly shaped objects. Have a collection of miniature dolls or spoons? Maybe you enjoy creating bouquets with fake flowers. With a convex glass frame, you can hang almost anything. This is a really great way to add something that no one else will have to your home. These frames can be custom made to fit the shapes and sizes of your collectible objects. This is where you can really get creative.

If all you want to do is hang your family photos, you can do this in unique and exciting ways as well. You can purchase frames in unusual shapes, colors, and styles. This will add a little extra excitement to your simple photographs. Pick antique oval frame, antique or vintage frames, decorative art frames, or even modern, sleek frames to create a special look on your walls. A great idea is to mix and match and hang all your pictures together. This will create a unique gallery that makes a big statement. If you have old black and white photographs of your ancestors, hang those as well. These will look especially wonderful in antique frames. By being creative, you can get your family photographs to look less simple and more interesting.
