Importance of apprenticeships by Steve Mich

Article published on November 29th 2011 | Law

Life can not be learned or lived with the help of theories. It is practical. Same is the case of any profession too. You can learn a lot of things through theories. But when you make it practical your success begins there. Apprenticeships are to help you learn things in practical.

You can learn engineering, medical sciences and law in theories. But the success lies how you adopt it in practical. Once you came out of the college and joined in a profession the importance of the theories are becoming less. You will have to show your skills practically and you will have to prove that you are capable of handling situations independently. For achieving this ability you will have to have a lot of practical experiences too. The real situations may be different from those you have studied in books. You may have to take spot decisions and you may be alone at that time. Here the practical experiences you have gained through apprenticeships will come for your help.

For example, if consider the profession of a lawyer, he is studying the laws, rules and regulations in the colleges. But the arguments and cross examines which he has learned in books may not work when he is physically appearing in a court to argue a case. The witnesses may not put their statement as he wants them to do. The evidences may not be favoring the interests of his client as he wants them to be. In such cases the theories he learned from the colleges may not come for his help. The practical wisdom he achieved through the apprenticeships will come here for his rescue. That is the importance of apprenticeships in oneâ€™s professional life.

However, to be a successful professional you should undergo apprenticeship under an expert. Otherwise the result may be negative. A rigorous training under an expert in that field will make you a successful professional, although, you have to undergo a lot of pain and agonies during apprenticeships.

In other words we can say that a successful completion of apprenticeships is the first stepping stone to a successful professional life. So, you should take more pain and should do more hard work during your apprenticeships. This will pay you back in terms of success and money in future.

There are a number of senior professional all over the world who are offering apprenticeships to fresher in their profession. They are really doing a good job in grooming new professional in their field. It is a part of the nation building too. When a nation is becoming rich with high quality professionals in each field, the development of the nation will happen automatically. That is the importance of apprenticeships and you should take it seriously if you are just out of college after completing the course.
