Issues to Consider when Choosing Long Island Attorneys by Duffyduffy

If you have been injured in an accident, you may be entitled to damages to compensate you for your pain and suffering, future medical expenses and lost wages. Long Island Attorneys have many years of experience in fighting for people’s legal rights, and will work tirelessly to ensure that you receive the highest award you deserve for your injuries.

Listed below are some issues to keep in mind when choosing Long Island Attorneys to represent you:

1. Does the attorney handle personal injury cases?

Personal injury litigation is a large field that includes car accidents, doctor’s malpractice, construction accidents, nursing home negligence and many others. The cases may be against a private individual, a corporation, a municipality or a public authority. Long Island Attorney is experienced in a variety of personal injury matters and will help you with your case.

2. Will the attorney have time to devote to my case?

Let’s face it; a solo practitioner working out of a small office will have fewer cases than a large firm occupying an entire office building. However, that is not to say that one or the other will spend more or less time on your case. A small firm will have less staff members than a large one, but by virtue of having fewer cases will be able to spend more time on each case. At the same time, a large practice will have more man power to handle a bigger caseload. Your rapport with the attorney, as well as his promptness in returning your calls or letters, his willingness to listen, his show of concern and thorough knowledge of your case is primal to the success of your professional relationship.

3. Will my case go before an injury?

This depends on many variables. Most of the cases settle before trial, thus avoiding large costs for expert witnesses, as well as stress for clients who would have to otherwise testify before a jury. However, the attorney must be willing to try a case, if he is not offered the settlement that will properly compensate you for your loss. Long Island attorneys will work on obtaining a highest compensation for you and are not afraid of trying cases. They work with top notch expert witnesses and are known to insurance adjusters as tough negotiators.

4. What is the attorney’s winning track record?

Many legal websites contain past clients’ testimonials, as well as reports on notable verdicts achieved in personal injury cases, and large settlement awards. Keep in mind that every case is different, and every plaintiff sustains injuries that are unique and personal to him. A young man may be able to physically recover quicker from a fractured knee, and have less time out of work, than an older person, with prior history of knee pain and arthritis. The damage awards take into account a lot of things about the plaintiff; age, health before the accident, work history after the accident, etc. Long Island attorneys have a proven record of obtaining just and equitable settlements for their clients, and they will fight to protect your legal rights!
