The Euro has hit a lowest in the 11 months against Dollar by Sandra Jeux

Article published on December 30th 2011 | Loans

When pitched against the dollar, the euro has hit a low and had come to its lowest in 11 months, a few days earlier. This happened just a day before when quite an important auction of the long-spanned debt of Italy was to be discussed when the stocks of the United States of America also fell down by 1 percent as far as the concern were relate about the economy in the starting of the few early months of the year 2012.

There was a sigh of relief in the European market when the short term bonds of Italy was strongly on sale but what was of real concern was that the next day auction, which was all the more challenging for everyone. All this had also hurt the sentiments of the market.

The index of the stocks of the United States of America also fell down by even more than 1 percent as far as thin trading was concerned. This happened as the investors were fearful of what is there in the future that is going if the start of the New Year that is 2012 would be difficult. S&P index also erased the broad gains of 2011, just after when they had turned out to be positive few weeks before.

The experts are of the view that there are some troubles that are being viewed by them. They have a feeling that are a little apprehensive that there are few risks involved in the future going by the what the climate of the preset times is.

The industrial stocks of the Dow Jones on an average fell down by 127.75 points or by 1.04 percent up to 12,163.60 points. The index of the Standard & Poor stocks also fell down by 14.07 points or 1.11 percent up to 1,251.39 points. Apart from this even the stock index of Nasdaq Composite also went down by 29.75 points or by 1.13 percent that went up till 2,595.45 points.
