Grants Galore for Woman Entrepreneurs by Bill Parkar

Article published on May 24th 2012 | Management

Women entrepreneurs are now enjoying a lot of privileges. They are being supported by the government in terms of 8m certification which is now an essential aspect of foraying into any trade. Irrespective of the products and services, you provide, a slew of advantages awaits you. If a woman belongs to the minority community, then the first and foremost task would be to apply for a minority certification. The federal administration has built the certification mechanism in such a manner that there are minimal hassles. Unlike the top notch organizations, which thrive on easy flow of finance, a woman owned small business requires adhering to some stringent rules and regulations to sustain the trade scenario. It is advised to go through these norms minutely so that you can avoid professional help. Availing an expert's advice may be expensive. In no circumstances, you can afford this extra expenditure.

Certification programs of the government require no guarantors and only highlight eligibility criteria across various multifarious schemes. There are several grants for expanding trade owned by women. All you need to provide is hundred percent quality assurances. US federal government prefers quality to adulterated display of visual opulence. Women business certification has recently become a bit difficult in order to provide grants to only the best organizations. There are some state owned corporations who provide grants for both government and private contracts. Some of these are almost half a century old. So they have that skill and expertise to organize certification programs in a crystal clear fashion. Acquiring a grant requires that a business should be owned primarily by a woman. A bulk of the day to day functionary should also be operated by women themselves. However it is not always very stringent.

A lot of documentation is involved in this process. All your contact and business details are to be filled in properly. Then the verification process will be initiated by the government. Officials will visit the physical location of the business accompanied by some expert women entrepreneurs. Their views are very important while providing the grants. 8(m) certification is a learning experience. It teaches you to be disciplined and sincere in the functioning of the business. A Woman owned business is at times vulnerable because of its structure. The owner who seeks a government grant must be aware of the frequent change of policies. Getting your documents updated as per these changes is a challenging task. You can also hire a consultant to brief you all the technicalities involved in the process.

Consultants are aware of the certification hurdles. They are in close touch with various officials of different departments from whom they garner a lot of information. Thus it helps you in getting access to a sea of knowledge periodically. Before you go into the documentation logistics, it is better to read the guidelines carefully. More than half of the procedure is explained there in detail. You just need to understand them and execute as per your business needs. There are periodical checks done on your business from time to time. This is to ensure whether all the norms of the certification are being adhered to. Once a WOSB has been certified, the owner receives umpteen opportunities to excel in the highly competitive market. Now she is at par with the other big companies in terms of harnessing a vast hinterland of domains.
