Fine art and photo canvas printing uses unique giclee printing technology that enables the reproduction of any image onto museum grade canvas in stunning detail and archival quality. By choosing a canvas printing company that delivers the highest quality canvas prints, anyone can have a photograph or artwork of his choice blown up to larger-than-life proportion with stunning colours and amazing detail. Giclee printing services are especially advantageous to artists and photographers looking for cost-efficient solutions in reproducing and preserving their works.

Tonal Reproductions, a fine art reproduction house based in Melbourne, is focused mainly on meeting the demanding requirements of professionals. The company employs full-time staff members with backgrounds in design, graphics, and photography themselves and thus, possess a full understanding of how essential it is that their canvas prints remain faithful to the original images. Tonal Reproductions uses the state-of-the-art canvas printing materials and advanced technology printers to produce fine art prints that are suitable for displaying in museums and art galleries.

When searching online of the best canvas printers, it is best to take into consideration whether a company you choose values transparency with its customers. An efficient and convenient ordering system must be in place and of course, pricing is also an important matter. Tonal Reproductions has been in the giclee printing business for some years and delivers customised solutions along with competitive pricing. We make sure that shopping for canvas prints is a pleasant experience for our clients. We employ a detail-oriented consultative process that saves both ours and our customers's time and leaves no room for costly mistakes.

The quality of our fine art prints is not easily rivalled and our personalised level of customer service is what draws buyers to do business repeatedly with Tonal Reproductions. From the basic to the most complex orders, we regard each one with equal importance. The consultative process begins with determining client expectations. With the final outcome in mind, the canvas printing process is made a whole lot quicker. The company has made it easy for customers to upload images and input additional order specifications along with their details on the company website.

We make an effort to be transparent with customers. We give you the details on the steps we plan to take to achieve the final outcome, as well as a time frame and the total cost. Basic image manipulation is offered for free by company. If an image requires heavier editing, we would recommend the customer to avail of our paid design services. The finalised image will be shown to the client via soft or hard proofs for approval before it is printed on canvas.

People order canvas prints for different purposes. Professional artists and photographers either need them for galleries or for filing. Art and photography enthusiasts like to hang the highest quality canvas prints at home or in the office. Tonal Reproductions wraps, mounts, and packages the finished fine art prints according to client requirements. They may choose from different kinds of wrapping. We use bevelled stretcher bars if a customer wants the prints mounted. We also include an acid-free backing tape and plastic-coated hanging wire with the shipment so the prints are ready for hanging any time.

The highest quality canvas prints is made possible with Canson Infinity, which we have entrusted to supply our canvases for years. The 100% cotton and the poly/cotton canvases we use are of archival quality with no optical brighteners. Used along with our ten-colour Epson 9900 printer and Epson UltraChrome inks, we only get the best results. We consult our ever-reliable colour management system for the best possible accuracy. Meticulous attention to detail and a systematic process are what set Tonal Reproductions apart from competition.
