Wedding planning can be stressful, but deciding where you say your â€œI doâ€™sâ€• doesnâ€™t have to Choosing a beach wedding location for your nuptials is a fun and romantic way to start your life together.

Let Mother Nature Decorate

Beach destination weddings eliminate the need for expensive dÃ©cor as the white sand and rolling waves provide the perfect romantic backdrop. A beach wedding location can be as formal or casual as you would like. The casual bride may wear a shorter dress and exchange vows with her barefooted groom. A walk down the aisle in a long formal train with a bridal party in full formal wear would be just as beautiful on the beach.

The options are endless and all of them romantic. The ocean can provide a soothing soundtrack as you walk down the sandy aisle strewn with petals toward an arbor decorated in flowers. You can stand with your betrothed inside of a heart made of sea shells in the soft sand while a sunset over the ocean provides a romantic glow over the ceremony. Bonfires can light the reception.

Start Your Honeymoon with the Ceremony

If you don't live near the coast, beach destination weddings may require travel for you, your bridal party, and your guests. Depending on your wedding budget the cost may be prohibitive. If lack of funds is keeping you from your dream beach wedding, perhaps consider a more intimate service instead. This might be a good way to sneak away with your love for a private ceremony to avoid the cost of a big wedding. After enjoying your honeymoon, you can still opt to celebrate your marriage with a reception when you get home.

Going away to get married may help you to leave behind a lot of the stress and anxiety that has undoubtedly been building up since the engagement. Thinking of your wedding as part of your vacation may help you relax and enjoy the special day. Go swimming or boating in the morning, refresh your tan on the beach, or go for a stress-relieving jog along the coastline. Breathe in the fresh salty air and get ready to start the rest of your life with your chosen partner.
