Article published on January 10th 2012 | Outdoors

Kemer has developed into one of the most popular destinations in Turkey. This idyllic resort town draws a large number of tourists each year, to enjoy the sun, sea and sand. Not least of the reasons why this city has become so popular is the abundance of activities - from free activities, to guided tours, to adventurous sporting pursuits on the waters. Relaxation, shopping, and practically anything else, can be found in and around the Kemer City Centre.

Water Activities

Being a relatively small sized city, Kemer city centre is not far very from the ocean. Many of the companies who organise water-based activities for tourists can be found both at the sea front and also in agencies around the centre, not far from many of the hotels in Kemer city centre. Water sports are spread all along the sea front, and include a huge range of activities. The most popular activity is free â€“ simply swimming in the warm and gentle Mediterranean waters can give anyone an enjoyable day out.

For those looking for extreme, exciting or just out of the ordinary water activities, the range of water sports is ideal. Para sailing is a very popular choice and includes flights up to 100-300 metres above sea level. Instruction and assistance from the professional companies around the front and city centre, is essential for enjoying a safe day of water sports.

Sight Seeing

Kemer is not just a tourist resort; the town has a rich association with powerful cultures of the past. Visitors to Kemer can spend a great deal of time admiring and learning about the various artifacts of this varied history, with the city walls and Hadrian Gate (in Antalya) providing evidence for the Roman influence. Many religious and cultural older buildings are dotted about the city, such as minarets and mosques.
