Dog Dryers: a Modern Grooming Technique by James

Article published on February 23rd 2012 | Pets

If you think it is the humans alone who need regular beauty brush-ups, then probably you are not a dog owner! As all the dogs owners know how much their little poodle loves GROOMING! Be it a Vodafone pug, the lovably dumb Labrador or the big guard German shepherd. Pampering and grooming makes them happy.

The skin and the hairs of the dogs require regular cleaning, washing and drying, which employs different equipment, among which the dog dryer is most essential. The skin needs to be perfectly dried keeping intact the natural oils and skin moisture, so it remains shiny and healthy.

A wide variety of dog dryers is being available in the markets. Its types include:

-Cage Dog Dryer: Generally employed for smooth coated breeds.

-High Velocity: A safer, faster and effective way to dry the tangles of your dog. Uses air pressure.

-Stand Dog Dryer: More suitable for poodle type coats or drop coated dogs.

While handling dogs, safety should be a major concern for the owners and stylists. Different dog dryers should be employed for different jobs.

There is a wide variety available ranging from a Metro Blaster, to a Quick Draw Dryer. Aeolus TD-901 blaster dog dryer is said to be among some of the bestselling dryers. You can buy a dryer of any range, depending shape, size and features.

You can also opt for customizing the dog dryers with different features like a strong FPM, one speed or variable speed fans and desired number of nozzles. Those on business can select models packed with all sorts of features and benefits to suit their grooming business.

But that is not all about dryers, if not maintained properly; your dear dog can be harmed. So, along with the regular maintenance of your automobiles and precious electronics, do not forget your dog's personal possession! Regular change of filters and cleaning will increase its life.
