Article published on May 2nd 2012 | Photography

Photography is a creative endeavour through which you can also make a great living. You can seek to specialise in wedding photography which has a huge demand. Wedding photography is challenging. Photography is an art which demands life-long learning. There are always better ways of lighting and posing. Photography magazines and journals are equally important for starters as well as experienced photographers seeking to refine their skills. There are tips and techniques for wedding photographers by competent authorities like PPA (Professional Photographers of America), WPPI (Wedding and Portrait Photographers International), LMPA (Licentiate Master Photographer Association) that you can refer to. You can choose to do courses from these photography institutes to have a solid understanding of wedding photography concept in order to survive in this highly competitive field.

Plan well in advance for the wedding day photography. Have a consultation with the couple before the wedding; this helps in building a ground of trust over which wedding photography can find their maximum expression. Have a pre-wedding consultation checklist in place. This would include confirming dates, time, location, and schedule of the wedding day. Record phone numbers and addresses of the bride, groom, and the parents.

Photos in the Church and of the ceremony are extremely important. You may be also asked to suggest few local destinations for wedding photography. Discuss about pre-wedding studio portraiture and environmental photos that you would be taking on the wedding day.

Capturing emotions of bride and groom through elegant pose and feelings make stunning wedding photography album. For wedding photographers, it is important to appreciate the magic of makeup. You need to leverage on colour images as well as black & white images as part of bringing variations to your output. You need to master wedding party setups and coordinating the shoot. For posing formals, there are quite a number of ideas for styling the dress and veil of bride that you can try.

As part of bridal portrait and engagement portrait, elegant hand posing can make a difference. Start making the most of veil as backdrop and hand posing. For the ceremony, you can try flash photography to bring into table ceremony variations. Also, you need to have a strategy for group portraits with the couple and the brideâ€™s family, the bride with her family, and images of the couple with the groomâ€™s family.
