

Article Side

An article covering outer Londons commuter zones and the perks of working at a London office by Edward Nolan

Article published on February 13th 2012 | Real Estate

Executive suites that can be rented in areas such as Leatherhead and Staines aren't just popular with the bosses leasing the space but with workers who prefer working outside of the city and make the most of the great lifestyle on offer in the suburbs.

To learn more read this article, which was written from facts on londonoffices.com, as it will explain all about the commuter options available to you and note a couple of reasons for choosing office space outside of the central London area and consider what the suburbs can bring to a business.

The corporate staff who work in central London offices have one issue in particular that causes their commute to be a high-stress event that they would rather avoid - I am, of course, talking about the hassle of London public transport. Pushing up against complete strangers in the comfort of a packed carriage is not exactly how most people would like to start the day, but you'll be happy to know that picking to work in an office outside London allows you to drive into work rather than running up public transport costs.

Another draw for office employees who want to escape the city is that you can purchase a house there and have a higher level of housing standards that you just wouldn't get to see in inner-city areas. Office workers in the suburbs can enjoy vast stretches of countryside chilling out in the beautiful surroundings and getting plenty of fresh air while their London-bound counterparts languish in tower blocks paying through the nose for sky high rents!

Opting for executive suites outside of the London area may worry a few business owners concerned with losing vital London contacts but with so many businesses relying on emails nowadays this isn't so troublesome and you can carry on your business regardless of your location. Plenty of money is saved by moving to the outskirts so you can channel more cash back into your business and on developing your services and staff base - don't feel as though London is the be all of office space!

Furthermore, there are great transport connections from central London stations with frequent services from Charing Cross, Waterloo and Liverpool Street, so you can get in to the centre of the city for business functions and be back out again in the same day without wasting time. This is one of the biggest benefits of taking London Office Space.

London business networks will always be there to help and you can recruit staff and attend the functions that the capital city has on offer for its business community but without signing on the dotted line for it. Working in the outskirts also opens up a wealth of new benefits that can take your company to the next stage by allowing you to make connections outside of the capital and not penning you in to working solely with London businesses.

Choosing offices that are just out of town means that London is still there for you to make the most of while being able to remove yourself when needed - give it a go and you'll not regret it!

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/real-estate-articles/an-article-covering-outer-londons-commuter-zones-and-the-perks-of-working-at-a-london-office.htm> - Article Side

Edward Nolan - About Author:

a London Office Space - My position requires that I remain organised at all times - I've devised a selection of ways to assort records and keep important items in the correct order. I monitor company correspondence, deal with paperwork queries and make sure the business runs as successfully as it should. In my opinion it's vital to ensure the base of any enterprise is healthy before other duties can be accomplished.

Article Keywords:

London Office Space, Rent Serviced Offices London, Office Space to Let, London Offices, London Office News

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!