Beat the Value Depreciation Through Car Leasing by Robbert H Cullen

Article published on July 27th 2012 | Self Help

Value depreciation is one of the disadvantages of purchasing a car. When you buy a brand new car and drive it around for a week and then decide to sell it, you will be surprised that its value has already depreciated significantly. How much more if you have been using it for 1 year or more? After 3 years, the value of your car will depreciate by 30 to 50 percent of its original value when you first bought it. The depreciation value will increase further if your car has accumulated a lot of mileage.

If you decide to buy a new car after several years then you have to sell your old car. Its value has depreciated greatly so it will only rake in a small amount of money that you can add to your funds for acquiring a new car. You still need a significant amount of money to buy yourself a new car. This is what is great about car leasing because you no longer have to worry about disposing the old car to get a new one. You just have to take it back to the leasing company and then lease another car that is a newer model.

In car leasing, you do not even have to worry about the depreciating value of the car you are using. The depreciating value of the car does not concern you in any way because your monthly payments will remain the same and when the lease ends you just have to return the car and not worry about selling it. You do not have to visit several car dealerships just to search for the one who can give you the best exchange deal for your old car.

There is really nothing to worry about in car leasing because after making a deposit and signing a contract then you are good to go. After that, you just have to pay the monthly dues for the car lease and when the contract ends then you just turn in the old car and search for a new car to lease. Car leasing really saves you a lot of trouble. Owning a car may be great but it can really be stressful because there are a lot of things that you have to worry about. You have to worry about the depreciation, maintenance costs and repairs. When you lease a car, all of that will be taken care of. All you have to do is make the monthly payments and then return the car at the end of the lease.
