

Article published on January 24th 2012 | Shopping

Reproduction jewellery has become one of the less expensive and most exquisite choices for jewellery lovers in the world. Whether males or females, antique style rings work well for both the sexes. These rings and similar jewellery, however, should be chosen carefully. It is important to identify the reproduced pieces before buying.

The choice of reproduction jewellery is dictated by several factors. The most important factor is the antique appeal and the style of these items. In the recent times, antique style rings of the reproduction variety have been very popular; many people have been attracted to some of the unique styles and designs of these intricate pieces of ornaments. The designs of reproduction jewellery represent the Victorian-era. The intricacies of designs and craftsmanship give an unusual design to each and every piece of jewellery. It is imperative to identify the antique style rings and recognize them, especially when the buyer has to pay a lot of money to own one piece. The authenticity and quality should be verified well in advance.

Before buying reproduction jewellery from a store, one should check the designer's name, the time and year. Such information will be useful in determining the exact age of the chosen antique piece and also identify with the professional collector. It also helps in knowing about the authenticity of the antique style rings or any other chosen jewellery item. It is always advisable to do the background check instead of depending on the seller.

A reproduction jewellery item can be verified by finding a picture of a similar item and comparing it with the same. Pictures can be obtained from costume jewellery books or from the internet too. The original designers of such vintage collection of jewellery will certainly have their own designer lines and websites to offer information.

Reproduction jewelry are antique pieces made from metal, the metal should be examined carefully. Such jewellery usually have thin patina layer with oxide coating on its surface. Bronze jewelry should be examined carefully for the oxidation layers in order to ensure that it is genuine.

If the chosen antique styles are made from white gold, it should be inspected for rhodium plating. Rhodium plating has been an important concern as it helps in creating the finest quality of jewelry out of white gold. It also offers bright and reflective color and makes the item tarnish-proof.

Any piece of reproduction jewellery will have the engraved signature or a tag from the designer. The antique style rings or jewellery should be turned over to check for the signature. The tag or signature of the designer should be well researched, as it is possible to fake a signature. The signature should be compared before choosing.

It is important to note that reproduction jewelry should be purchased only from reputable companies. It is likely that some sellers will try to fake antique styles. In order to go for a genuine buy, always hunt for jewelers that deal in the best quality and have a reputation in the market.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/shopping-articles/tips-to-recognize-reproduction-jewellery.htm> - Article Side

AngeloEverton - About Author:

a Reproduction jewellery is rare collection. Many people are fond of a antique style rings and vintage collections.

Article Keywords:

Reproduction jewellery, antique style rings

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!