Over the centuries wedding dresses have changed, but the bride has always wanted her dress to be special, to make it prettier. Many centuries ago, only rich people could afford the materials of red, purple, black, and true, so rich the bride will wear a dress decorated with colored gemstones. The bride will really shine in the sun. Dress with sleeves or a train runs a status symbol for the poor had to use the material as little as possible. Factory production of materials, their cost reduction due to the loss of the initial value train wedding dress, but it has become a tradition over time.

Fashion has changed with the dress color to those of white or white change, but because he was not a practical shade for most purposes, blue was another favorite, as well as pink. In the 1800s, became a gray color for wedding gowns for brides of the lower classes, because the dress was used again on Sunday the bride better. For those who had to wear dresses that will be used for regular times after the wedding, many brides would decorate the dress is a special day temporary decorations.

"Traditional" wedding dress, as it is known today did not appear until the 1800s. By 1800 the machine made fabrics and cheap muslins made the white dress with a veil the predominant mode. In the nineteenth century, the bride wears her white dress after the wedding was made. Re-cut dress, it is suitable for various functions.

Over time, women's fashion has changed. Skirts rose and fell, but the long dress, with or without a train, left the length of the brides prefer. The length of the sleeves and neck style has changed with the current fashion, but mostly remained modest. Full sleeves, narrow sleeves, sleeveless styles have come and gone and come again. The simple design of the development has been discovered over the years.

The focus of the bride is to find an appropriate wedding dress for her to wear. Style should conform to its shape and its financial resources, as well as the location for the ceremony. For example, a large framed woman should try on a dress she likes, and then choose the one that flatters her. Every bride wants to look beautiful on this special day. If she has $ 1,000 to spend on a dress, then she should not look at the $ 5,000 dress. If the wedding will take place in the garden, heavily beaded dresses, perhaps you should avoid.
