You can make perfumes at home! by Arvind Reman

Article published on July 3rd 2012 | Shopping

We all love to beautify ourselves with some of the finest designer perfumes for various occasions. There are innumerable brands of fragrances, out of which, some might be unknown to you and me. In this world, there are various countries manufacturing fragrances and perfumes. Some of the Gulf and European countries are famous for their distinctive perfumes.

There are perfumes like Hugo Boss and others, which youâ€™ll find pleasing. But, what if you knew the formula to make perfumes at your place? Wonâ€™t you love it? It would be inexpensive, easy-to-do, and as per your wish. But, to make perfumes at home, you need to know the manufacturing procedure. Without which, you can do nothing.

Also, making your own perfumes mean, itâ€™s all yours! No one can have that kind of perfume. Itâ€™ll be exclusively with you. Wonâ€™t you like to have your own-manufactured perfumes? If youâ€™re a fragranc lover, then youâ€™ll love this perfume making experience.

Suppose, you want to make a perfume which does not have alcohol in it. Yeah, most of the perfumes contain alcohol. Then, you can opt for one without alcohol. Itâ€™s simple; you can make it at your place within no time. You just have to remember these 5 steps:

No. 1

You need to mix Â¼ cup of almond oil with 6 drops of essential oil. Over here, essential oil can be any scent you like, from sandalwood and rose to strawberry and lemon. Youâ€™re the king; you can choose whichever essential oil you want.

No. 2

Once, youâ€™re done with the 1st step, now you just need to pour this mixture into a dark bottle with a lid or cap. As, youâ€™ll be shaking the bottle periodically, you need to make sure that you choose a bottle which has got a lid. And, you need to shake the bottle at least once a day to make sure everything is getting amalgamated.

No. 3

Then, you can place the bottle in a cool, dry place for at least a week. The longer time you keep it, stronger and long-lasting will be its scent. But, if you keep it for a shorter period, itâ€™ll give a subtle fragrance.

No. 4

After that take 2 tbsp. of diluted water and pour it down in that bottle. Then mix everything up by putting the lid back on and shaking the bottle vigorously.

No. 5

Put a small dab on your skin and check it out! If you want the scent to be a little stronger, you can add a few more drop of scented oil. To make the fragrance less strong, add another tablespoon of diluted water.

And, there youâ€™ve made your perfume!

But, if you donâ€™t like putting in your energy and time, you can opt for some of the branded perfumes in the market like Hugo Boss perfume.

This is for the perfumes which donâ€™t have alcohol. These kinds of perfume have a shelf life of 1 month (the fragrance fades out after a month). Whereas, if you use alcohol, the fragrance lasts long and also itâ€™s strong enough.
