Getting error messages on your HP machine while browsing or surfing? Itâ€™s no more a strange thing, as it happens some or the other time. Isnâ€™t it SAD? Obviously, it would be as you are at the receiving end. You might be in desperate need to check some mails or get information on the web, or make payment for your utility bills or to book an air ticket, when the inevitable things take hold of your system, leaving behind you in a helpless situation. But donâ€™t put blame on the submissive HP machine. It might be working well with other programs. So think beyond to put an end to the prevailing issue.

Go through this HP repair article and find quick solutions for Internet related issues such as â€œError loading web sitesâ€•, â€œThe connection was interruptedâ€•, â€œNo programs can load websitesâ€•, â€œ toâ€¦â€• First of all figure out where the problem is. Try to open other websites on the same browser. If the situation is different then there is some kind of server problem with particular website, and you canâ€™t do anything except â€˜wait and watchâ€™. However, if there is negative response then try after clearing browser cookies and cache. It might help to some extent. The process may differ as per the running Windows version and browser type. If the website doesn't look right, probably showing distorted images or animations or is reluctant to play video or audio content then you need to take help of virus and spyware removal tool.

If you donâ€™t have it, then go with Microsoft Security Essentials. Customizing the browser and the Windows Firewall can also give relief form the issue. For effective repair and maintenance, you can go through the knowledgebase and video tutorials available at the portal. Community support forum is also there to ease your job. Here you can share problems and solutions both with other HP users.

HP support can give a breakthrough. You can call experts and let them have the remote access of the system to assess and fix the Internet related issue. Experts can take advanced steps like analyzing and configuring the security settings, performing remote scan to eradicate viruses, spyware and other malicious products, and resetting the Internet connection. They can also amend settings of the email client, instant messenger, social network and web-based clients as per requirement. If the cause is related to a faulty extension, theme or hardware acceleration, it would be unraveled under the Safe-Mode. Disabling those culprits or customizing toolbars and settings can pay off.

Big wigs of the customer support are also catering the HP Technical Help service from their base. Their emergence has scaled up the customer-satisfaction but lowered down the wait time and charges, thus empowering HP customers. Have a look at their services, terms and conditions, service guarantee, and other critical aspects and take a comparative view from others before you eventually invite one for technical assistance. Besides resolving Internet related problems, experts will be responsible for taking care of issues related to software compatibility, driver conflicts, corrupted system files, damaged Windows Registry settings, and more.
