Highlights of Aiphone Video Intercom Systems by Julia Roger

Article published on January 30th 2012 | Technology

aiphone video intercom can revolutionize the world of security solutions by integrating several different functions together within the same system. When you look at video intercom systems, there are certain features that you are looking for. Some of the best video intercom systems from Aiphone provide you with features over and above what you expect, which is what sets the company apart from other service providers.

A good intercom system can help streamline your communication allowing you to control video entry as well as access simultaneously. There is composite video output, wide angle camera with zoom functionality, transfer of calls to external lines, call forwarding and monitoring systems, paging, recording and call-in transfers. The entire set of features have opened up a new dimension altogether. Audio with video has always been something that has been talked about but these powerful intercom systems make sure that you have all the features of audio and video combined.

The communication through these video intercom systems is extremely easy and the latest products even let you use it over IP adaptors. It is possible to watch individuals while also recording the entire video on to a PC. This gives you the great advantage of holding a conversation with an individual without really moving away from your PC. There are other features available with some of the advanced systems too like conveniently unlocking the door while you are still online. These systems can be put to great use, for example in complexes where you can connect the office lobby area to the tenants with ease. Enhanced versions will allow you to connect multiple places through the system. You can make exceptions for entry if required. Special zones can also be created for announcements in complexes.
