Some of the requisites you need to hire a car in Oman are as follows.

A valid International driving license or a valid license from the United States of America.

You will need an insurance cover. This is a must and it is advisable to get a comprehensive insurance policy as traveling in Oman involves a lot of off-road driving, especially if you are planning to visit the interiors and explore as much as you can. Most companies provide insurance as part of the car rent, but in case your provider does not, please note that car insurance here is mandatory.

You can only hire a car if you are over 25 years of age. While, some companies may make exceptions, it is highly unlikely.

A proper induction on driving in the country is necessary, so ask your rental provider for some dos and don'ts to keep out of trouble. You may think of this as unintelligent, but every country has its unique ways. For instance, you can be fined for driving a dirty car in Oman. This is just one example that you would have never known unless someone told you. Road signs can also be quite puzzling, so ask for some help by sharing your itinerary or list of destination you are interested in visiting during your stay here.
