Finding a hotel in India is not a difficult task at all. But finding a good hotel might be a little difficult as there are many to choose from. There are the super luxury five star hotels and there are the three star hotels for the regular traveler. It is up to the client to choose the kind of accommodation he wants. But when it comes to quality, grandeur and glamour, there are still many that can leave one asking for more.

When it comes to luxury hotels and experiencing true Indian hospitality, the hotels in Rajasthan are the ones to look out for. Here mostly all the major palaces have been transformed into hotels. People pay with open arms to experience the royal treatment here. What is so striking about them is that the in essence it maintains the traditional, Indian ambience and it is combined with contemporary amenities that is the very best according to international standards.

On the other hand, there are the state of the art luxury hotels which are contemporary and classy at the same time. With post modern art displayed on the walls and the top rates designers in todayâ€™s time doing the interiors, they are a visual treat. Equipped with gymnasiums, swimming pools and spas as well as harboring sprawling board rooms and conference centers, they are an epitome of elegance. Sleek lines and not overt ornamentation underline their dÃ©cor- making them perfect for the jet setting international traveler, traveling for work.

Most of the hotels in India in modern times are also going for the eco friendly way of living. Abundance of greenery all around and use of eco friendly products inside make them more environment friendly and that is a step greatly being appreciated by the environmentalists, authorities and the masses alike. As far as the food is concerned, India being a multi lingual and multi cultural country, it is a repository of delicacies which are found in all their glory in the different hotels here. And the same can be said about the different ways of dÃ©cor in these hotels depending upon which part of the country it is situated in.

Vacationing and traveling can thus be made a luxury affair with these wonderful hotels in India. no wonder that the clients get full value for their money, combined with impeccable hospitality for which India is known all over the world.
