Most Famous Pubs in Edinburgh by Jesse Wallace

Article published on May 22nd 2012 | Travel

If youâ€™re planning a trip to vibrant Edinburgh, youâ€™ll definitely want to spend time in some of the city famous pubs. Whether youâ€™re looking for a quiet spot to sip a pint, somewhere to hear local music, or a livelier place to mingle, youâ€™ll find it in Edinburgh. This historic city is one of the best to visit in all of Europe, with its castle-like architecture, windy cobblestone streets and some of the friendliest people around. Whether youâ€™re staying in Old Town or New Town, youâ€™ll find a whole host of famou pubs with a traditional Scottish feel.

Take a stroll down to the Grassmarket and youâ€™ll find hundred-year-old pubs, like the cozy White Hart Inn. Scottish poet Robert Burns is rumored to have spent time there during his last visit to Edinburgh in the 18th century. Just a stone's throw from there is Biddy Mulligans, an Irish bar known for its live music and tasty pub food. If youâ€™re feeling adventurous, you might want to continue your pub crawl up the hill to Finneganâ€™s Wake, another Irish bar with live music every night.

The Cowgate, just a short walk from the Grassmarket, is another place to find famous pubs. Stop by the Three Sisters to watch a football game and have a bit of lunch. Or, head up the hill to Greyfriars Bobbyâ€™s Bar, named after a dog who, in the mid-1800s, spent years visiting his dead ownerâ€™s grav nearby.

Add Edinburghâ€™s smallest pub, The Halfway House, to your must-see list. This tiny pub, located just off the Royal Mile, plays host to regulars from all over the world. Ensign Ewart, the cityâ€™s highest pub, is a short distance away on the Royal Mile. You might also want to stop by Deacon Brodieâ€™s Tavern, named after the legendary William Brodie, a Deacon Councilor of the city in the 18th century. If youâ€™re in New Town, youâ€™ll find many pubs located on or nearby Rose Street. Donâ€™t miss Hogs downstairs pub with great food and a cozy vibe.

With the range of Edinburgh hotels available, youâ€™re sure to find somewhere nice to stay during your visit to the historic city. Make sure to make time for some of the cityâ€™s best attractions, like the Edinburgh Castle, Holyrood Palace and the Sir Walter Scott monument. And if the rainy Edinburgh weather kicks up, dip into one of the cityâ€™s famous pubs for a pint or two.
