If you want to get the real taste of country life, then you should opt for a farmstay in Margaret River the next time you are touring the region. A farmstay can be any kind of accommodation which may or may not be on a fully-functional farm, but most likely set amidst rural countryside. Farmstays in Australia are often family-oriented, interactive and relaxing. They are perfect for travelers looking for a different and unique type of holiday for the family: something educational, safe and peaceful for the little ones.

Farmstays are becoming increasingly popular nowadays, particularly amongst families with kids. Designed in the same way as typical bed and breakfasts (B&Bs), farmstays offer comfy accommodation, affordable rates, delicious breakfast and access to farm animals and activities. A farmstay in Margaret River is a great place for parents and children to learn, bond and engage.

One thing that appeals to most people about choosing a farmstay in Margaret River is the opportunity to participate in farm activities. Whether you love to bottle feed baby goats, clean up the barn or collect chicken eggs, all is possible whilst staying at a farmstay. Whatâ€™s more, guests will also get the chance to learn about and play with farm animals including chickens, lambs, horses, cows, geese, rabbits and goats to name a few.

In todayâ€™s tough economic times, staying at a farmstay in Margaret River might be the most suitable option for travelers on a budget. Rates at these properties start from as low as $150 per night for a family (two adults and two kids). Almost every farmstay in Margaret River offers breakfast every day that is included in the rates, or self-catering option if the property has a kitchen.

Nowadays, you can find a number of farmstays available throughout the Margaret River region. This is partly because of farmersâ€™ desire to earn extra income together with their willingness to offer visitors something unique. Since a large number of people these days want to get away from the hustle and bustle of city life and experience the country lifestyle, farmstay accommodation is an excellent choice for couples or families.

No matter which farmstay in Margaret River you choose, all these properties are off the beaten path and offer a completely new perspective on countryside living. So why not experience something new and discover what life is like on a countryside property? A farmstay in Margaret River will provide you with everything you need for a memorable stay.
