Spain has natural features that are quite impressive and which have lots and lots to offer to people who choose the country as their favorite holiday spot. However, away from the natural features attracting thousands of tourists from all over the world, the country also has some interesting manmade features you can never miss out on. They consist of different things but each has its value in the country.

Monuments: The monuments in Spain are in plenty and regardless of which region you choose to be in, you will find some which are most interesting. They can be anything from churches, towers, castles, walls among various other things. The monuments of course have a special meaning to them as far as the history of Spain is concerned and you will get the chance to learn a few things about which each represents.

Architectural buildings: apart from the monuments, most of Spanish history is well represented by the buildings within it. You will get the chance to behold some of the most amazing pieces of architecture from renowned architects across the world but who were born and bred in Spain. The architectural works are mostly enjoyed form the squares, churches, cathedrals and other different kinds of buildings now serving different offices in Spain. What you get to see will depend in the region or city you have chosen to be in. You will find the buildings most interesting with art works you can never find anywhere else in the world.

Museums: these are of course a treasure for any given country and they are to Spain. Besides most of them being within monuments and interesting ancient buildings, they contain valuable pieces of art. The collections you will find in most of these museums are quite valuable some having been done by world famous artists. Some are actually dedicated to such artists and will contain the masterpieces of the artist they are dedicated to. There are numerous museums in Spain and you can always choose those to visit depending on what they have to offer.

Recreational and entertainment facilities: away from all the buildings, with amazing histories and collections, you will find all the entertainment and recreational facilities you could ask for in the different Spanish regions. The bars, restaurants, resorts, hotels, spas and gyms and also parks and gardens are scattered well all over the country. Regardless of where you are in the country, you wonâ€™t miss the very best of services that you might be in need of.
