Good Website Development in Brisbane by Walt Yoast

Article published on January 24th 2012 | Web Design

You may choose to hire someone to design your website or choose to do it on your own. Either way if you are into website developing in Brisbane, there are certain pointers you should keep in mind. The kind of website you have will give your visitors a permanent impression of the kind of business or service you run and therefore it needs to be optimal.

When it comes to the designing of a site, the first thing you need to ensure is that it loads in the least possible time. If you keep visitors lingering on the site without anything coming up on the screen, chances are that they are going to log out and find another site to visit. This means that the designs and images that are used should be optimized for the web. No matter how great your design is. If you do not have it loading fast enough itâ€™s going to be of no use.

Next your navigation path should be clear. Once you have designed your site, test it online and ask a few friends who have never seen the site in the making to navigate through it. This is the best way to see how the site works in real time. Let your information be of the right kind and let it point people in the right direction. Create a site map that is easily accessible to your readers so that they can easily find the section they are looking for.

Computers in this day and age come with a multitude of resolutions and an important is to optimize your site for multiple resolutions. This will be a thoughtful gesture and one that will get you appreciation and viewership across a multitude of mediums. You will also need to make sure that you site is compatible across popular browsers such as IE, Google Chrome, Firefox and some others. Netscape can be a bit troublesome when it comes to HTML based designs.

In the design of the website make sure that the fonts you use are readable and those that are used professional. Some fonts may look good in your personal opinion but will not really look good on the site. Some fun based fonts may result in your text looking nice, but for the general viewer you may come across as less than professional.

Designing a good site needs a bit of intuition as well. Look through websites of a similar nature online and take pointers from them as well.
