

Article Side

What Should a Good Website Contain by Dexter

Article published on December 26th 2011 | Web Design

A website is the online representation of a business. In today's world almost everything is on internet. So it is the best place to advertise the business through a website. Website can reduce your advertising cost and maximizing your profit and also make you popular. But before that you should have a good sense about how to make a good website and what a good website should contain.

In a good website what contains should have it's depend on the type of the business. But basically a good website should have a very good designed Homepage, where navigation tabs are highlighted. A beautiful flash image in header and a good designed logo along with the business name and then a small description about the business. After that, a Services page, where the services of the business is displayed along with the prices. Then a page called Testimonials, where the reviews of customers are displayed. Then a Contact us page which contain the contact details of the owner of the business. In homepage an Enquiry form is also needed, which help the owner to interact with the customers directly. A Discussion blog is also helpful to design a good website. And the most important is to choose the right color combination and the right images. The website should design in a simple way that customers can easily browsing the site.

[Web Design Website Development, E-Commerce Websites, Mobile Website Design Development, Logo Design Logo Creation, Search Engine Optimization (SEO), Social Media Application, Facebook Application, Mobile Application Design Development, Mobile Search Results Optimisation, Google - Yahoo - Bing - Search Engine Optimisation, Internet Video Marketing, Internet Video Product Service, Corporate Video Production, Business Video Presentations, Assignments Help, Examination Help, Essay writing, Editing & Proofreading, Thesis & Dissertation Help]

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/web-design-articles/what-should-a-good-website-contain.htm> - Article Side

Dexter - About Author:

Dexter is a passionate Internet a Website Design enthusiast who spends most of his time in helping a Website Designer small and medium business enterprises to grow and multiply their potential. When he is not staring into the computer he is either reading books or out doing adventure sports.

Article Keywords:

website design, website designer, web design, web development, logo design