Finding time for fitness is a critical step in the journey towards better living. Unfortunately, between the gargantuan meals and endless parties youâ€™re sure to take in this holiday season, itâ€™s easy for Canadians to neglect the importance of burning daily calories. If youâ€™ve undergone a weight loss surgery â€“ either a gastric bypass surgery or a laparoscopic lap band surgery â€“ you know how important it is to commit to a healthy amount of physical activity year-round. Omni Surgery Centre, Reginaâ€™s weight loss authority in Saskatchewan, Canada, has put together a short list of easy ways to get some exercise during the busiest time of the year.

The Mall Marathon: Take advantage of the fact that youâ€™re going to be stuck fighting the masses at your local mall. Instead of looking for that â€œperfect spotâ€• take the less-stressful approach and find one on the outer limits of the parking lot. Youâ€™d be surprised how many calories you can knock off just walking to and from your car.

BONUS POINTS: Make the mall trip really count and do any extra couple of laps before you make your purchase.

A Wish-List with a Goal: Get ready to fight back against holiday weight-gain by asking your friends and family for fit-friendly gifts. Having a healthy lifestyle cookbook, a yoga mat or a set of free-weights around after the holidays can help you get a jumpstart on a New Yearâ€™s resolution.

Learning New Things: Taking up a new winter activity like skiing or snowboarding can incorporate some fun while staying active during the colder months.

Family Matters: Why not get the whole family active? Taking a walk, tobogganing or having a playful snowball fight can be a great way to forget the cold and stay active â€“ plus the kids will love it!

Sticking to a Schedule: The overall best way to maintain an active lifestyle during the holidays is to make a schedule and stick to it. Plan the days you want to go to the gym â€“ and for every day you skip, donate one of your gifts to charity.

At our state-of-the-art facility, Omni Surgery Centre offers bariatric stomach banding surgery to qualified candidates who have had difficulty losing weight on their own. The minimally-invasive procedure is virtually painless, and patients often leave our centre within the same day.
