Who thought that obesity can be the root cause of so many diseases but it is actually true that it brings with a plethora of diseases on discount like Type 2 diabetes, arthritis, asthma, sleep apnea, hypertension and various heart related issues. Various epidemiological data has been used many a times which has an increasing evidence of a positive relation between the increased body weight and some malignancies of the breast, pancreas, ovaries, esophagus and the colon.

There are various oncologists who have suggested that there should be a more aggressive and proactive screening that should be done for the cancer that strikes the obese people especially in parts like breast, uterine and colorectal cancers. So there is a close relation between the colorectal cancer and the weight loss surgery or the weight reduction surgery. Even the researchers believe that it happens due to the de-regulation of the energy homeostasis that happens with the colorectal carcinogenesis and with insulin resistance and the impaired ability that comes with the ability to stabilize the plasma glucose levels.

According to a recent study that it was found out that 1482 women who were suffering from obesity had undergone bariatric surgery and they had a high percentage of being diagnosed with the cancer. Which is a very alarming rate and it needs to be controlled so what is it that with which we can stop these two devils entering our body and it is a known fact that it is the women that are more susceptible to the risk of cancer and it is only they who can control all the possibilities of this menace entering their bodies.

So it is very important that the women take charge of the situation and make themselves aware about the entire situation so that they can bring the entire situation under control and get to know about the fact that there is a urgent need to control themselves from getting obese and to control the menace of cancer entering their body through any medium.

Women who are obese can get the bariatric or weight loss surgery done in their bodies so that they can reduce the unwanted fat present in their body and make themselves healthier to face the challenges of life. Weight reduction surgery is very safe and it is quite affordable and there are no risks attached to it. So it is important that one should safeguard ones self from all the risks attached with diseases and present a healthier self to the world.
