Most of you know the frustrating feeling of buying the latest mobile phone only to find that a week later a newer model has come out. Technology is advancing all the time at a rapid rate and the same could be said for the technological improvements and advancements in storing and preserving wine.

Australian and New Zealand wine is growing in popularity and quality. Great wine means home cellars bursting at the seams and fast growing collections. Professional wine collectors, investors and restaurant owners are turning to professional offsite wine storage to create more space at home but more so to protect their investments.

This service is becoming more and more popular as the reputation for these storage facilities grows and the benefits are being seen. There is now a real need for attentive, professional and discreet wine storage in Sydney.

There are flexible storage solutions to choose from, whether you require a start up vault or a full cellar, short term storage for an event or longer term vaults for the true wine connoisseurs.

Private vaults hold 8, 16, 24 and beyond cases of wine. This is great on the pocket as it means you can start small and grow your cellar. The vaults are of timber construction with a stainless steel latch and the most advanced vaults have sensory lighting, so you can see where you're going without prolonged light. Ventilations slots are a must to keep the temperature even and the walls are concrete sealed. A regular shot of ozone keeps the mould and bacteria from invading your wine collection.

The best wine storage facilities are experts in wine. They don't just run a warehouse they look after and understand wine and how best to look after it. Look out for great benefits such as receipt and dispatch notifications which help you keep track of your collection along with help setting up a wine management system so you can keep control of your wine from your own computer. Packaging and good sturdy trolleys will protect your wine in transit along with great on hand assistance and knowledge from staff.

If your wine collection is beginning to grow or you are keen to start one, speak to an expert who can explain the benefits to offsite wine storage for you and your bottles. Always keep ahead of the latest wine storage technology with a reputable facility.
